Summary of findings

Overall summary

Magdalen House is a purpose-built residential care home without nursing for 53 people, some of whom are living with dementia.

We found the following examples of good practice.

- The service was clean, hygienic and free of unpleasant odours throughout.
- Staff had received relevant training in infection control and prevention and had their competencies assessed in this area.
- There was sufficient supplies of personal protective equipment (PPE), with designated stations in the service for staff to access. Staff were observed wearing PPE appropriately in line with national guidance.
- The environment was well organised and had been adapted to support social distancing. There was a designated staff changing area, including laundry facilities to reduce the risk of exposure.
- Individual risk assessments had been conducted in consultation with people who used the service and or their representatives.
- Risks to staff in relation to their health, safety and well-being had been thoroughly assessed. Where individual risks had been identified, control measures had been implemented to mitigate against.
- The provider had appropriate infection control policies and procedures in place. These had been developed in line with current government guidance and fully implemented in the service.

Further information is in the detailed findings below.

Detailed findings

Background to this inspection

We carried out this inspection under Section 60 of the Health and Social Care Act 2008 as part of our regulatory functions. This inspection was planned to check whether the provider is meeting the legal requirements and regulations associated with the Health and Social Care Act 2008.

As part of CQC's response to care homes with outbreaks of coronavirus, we are conducting reviews to ensure that the Infection Prevention and Control practice was safe, and the service was compliant with IPC measures. This was a targeted inspection looking at the IPC practices the provider has in place.

The inspection took place on 19 November 2020 and was announced.
